Economics

Economics is a social science concerned with the economic behavior of consumers and producers as well as the operation and evaluation of economic systems. Economists study questions like why does the price of gasoline go up and down and what can we do to improve the economy. Studying economics gives you insight into how the world around you actually works. As a business economist, you will function as a forecaster and analyst of business conditions.

You will study three main areas of economics - macro, micro and statistics. Macroeconomics concentrates on issues that affect an entire society, such as inflation, unemployment, investment, economic growth and international trade. Microeconomics focuses on the market competitive structure and performance, and resource allocation using the supply and demand model to determine prices and quantities.

The economics-real estate option is for students interested in broader conceptual and policy issues associated with real estate and land use.

WSU is the only Kansas Board of Regents’ institution to offer a degree program in real estate. By providing an emphasis through four different majors, WSU allows you to custom design your program of study in an unique way among real estate programs in the United States.

Admission

When you choose to major in economics, you are admitted to the W. Frank Barton School of Business. An academic advisor from the Business Advising Center will help you enroll in an orientation course where you will learn to develop a study plan and specific requirements for degree completion.

Masters Program

The Barton School of Business also offers four master’s degree programs. The Masters of Accountancy (MACC), Masters of Arts in Economics (MA-Econ), Masters of Business Administration (MBA) with four different focus areas, and the Executive Masters of Business Administration (EMBA).
