

HNRS 398A Travel Seminar: Turkey & Greece Honors Intercultural Dialogue Overseas Colloquium May 2013

What

A new Study Abroad course opportunity which complements the established HNRS 106 Intercultural Dialogue course thus allowing students to pursue advanced studies in the area. HNRS 106, however, is not a pre-requisite. Any student is welcome to enroll.

While overseas, we will partner with non-profit organizations in destination countries that have proven success on issues of social justice. Students will participate in on-site efforts focused on these examples of what methods are working. Then students will use these models to develop their own proposals for similar or newly-inspired ideas to be applied in other countries struggling with similar challenges.

When

May 18th – May 29th, 2013.

Where

Turkey & Greece.

In Greece, work with non-profits targeting the economic crisis for strategies to improve the government's and/or individuals' financial health.

In Turkey, work with non-profits that work across religious boundaries to preserve peace and democracy.

Why

Only a small number of WSU students spend time studying abroad. Many in this urban-serving, non-traditional university have work and family obligations that make going overseas for an extended period of time difficult. This innovative, two-week international experience will encourage more students to go abroad yet be able to make the most of a short sojourn. Contrasting a tourist excursion, this educational journey will involve intercultural dialogue, local interaction, and real-world inspiration. This will impact how the students view their global society and its members. It will inform their future decisions. And it will sow unseen benefits as they also touch individual lives while in these countries and beyond.

"Intercultural dialogue is the best guarantee of a more peaceful, just and sustainable world."

~ Robert Alan (American writer, artist and social activist; 1922-1978)
